SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Warrant Calls for Report on Site for Shawheen School and Extra Appropriation for Police Department.

The special town meeting called in accordance with the action taken at the regular annual town meeting on the question of a site for the Shawheen Village school will be held in the town hall, Saturday evening, April 15, at 7.30 o'clock.

As no site has been selected for the school it was at first deemed unnecessary to hold the special meeting but after a conference with the town counsel, Daniel J. Murphy on Tuesday it was decided to hold the meeting on Saturday evening of next week.

At that time a report drawn up by a joint committee from the school board and the selectmen, and which is to be completed at a meeting held this evening, will be placed before the voters. Under provisions of Article one in the warrant, it will then be possible to make an appropriation for the purchase of land or to take such further action as may be deemed expedient.

Article two requires the appropriation of a sum of $1200 in order to provide for a day off for the regular patrolmen and the purchase of a motorcycle for the new traffic officer. The appropriation for the police department made at the regular town meeting was $2000 in excess of that of the previous year. It was the intention of the Finance Committee that a part of this sum be used for the purchase of an auto truck for the use of the police department but the voters expressed the wish that it be used rather for an extra traffic officer and to make provisions for giving the regular patrolmen a day off at regular intervals. It was found that the appropriation was not sufficient to cover the expense entailed, therefore an additional sum is asked for. It is felt by many persons that a motorcycle would make the work of the extra traffic officer more efficient.

The release of a certain right of way for the maintenance of drainage pipes over premises of Albert L. Hall and Clyde A. White situated on the southerly side of Park street will be taken up under Article three.

GARDEN CONFERENCE

Amateur and Professional Gardeners Share their Experiences at All-day Meeting

A real spring feeling, full of inspiration for the planning and planting of the garden, in spite of the several inches of snow outside pervaded the November clubhouse on Monday, the occasion being the all-day Farm and Garden Conference.

The house was decorated with daffodils, forsythia, and the bursting buds of horse-chestnut and lilac, as well as bright bouquets of helichrysums and statice. On tables at the sides of the hall were arranged a variety of exhibits including luncheon sets in cut work, spreads and pillows in Colonial tufting, hand-netted bed canopies, basketry, bird houses, wrought iron work, hand painted china, parchment lamp shades, and crocheted hemp rugs.

The morning session opened at eleven o'clock with Mrs. James C. Sawyer presiding, and a short time was devoted to remarks concerning the exhibits. Mrs. T. Pinkham of Shawheen village, who is a welfare worker for the American Woolen company, spoke of the baskets made by its employees. Although the company has for a number of years provided classes in millinery, dress-making and cooking, the basketry classes are a comparatively new venture, having been carried on for only one year. Mrs. Pinkham believes that the creative instinct must be satisfied and that basketry, as an avocation for the girls and women in whom she is interested, has filled a real need. The teacher is also an employee of the American Woolen company, a native of Poland who followed basket making as a craft before he came to this country. It is planned to make the basket work the beginning of a craft shop which can be developed into something broadening and helpful to a larger group than was reached during the past season.

Fire loss can be materially diminished when there is sufficient interest on the part of the people.

Indianapolis has demonstrated this fact in 1921, a year of greatly increased fire losses elsewhere, by reducing her own loss by $580,000 through the persistent co-operative effort of her citizens.

What Indianapolis has done can also be done in other towns and cities.

Prize Medals Awarded

The prize medal offered each year by the Daughters of the Revolution to the child in the public schools who, in the judgment of the committee, writes the best essay on a given subject, was this year won by Isabella Bodwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Bodwell of Elm street, a pupil in the eighth grade of the Stowe school. Her essay was on the subject "What My Community Has Done for Me." Lucy Sanborn also of the eighth grade received honorable mention.

The essay of Robertus Lawson of the Bailey school was judged the best of those written by pupils in the rural schools.

On Thursday afternoon in Punched hall, before an audience composed of the pupils and teachers of the seventh and eighth grades, members of the Phoebe Foxcroft Chapter, D. R., and other friends, the transfer of prize medals and award of certificates took place. Last year's prize winner, Dorothy Trott, presented the medal to Isabella Bodwell and Hugo Asolan presented the second medal to Robertus Lawson, these girls in their turn receiving certificates to show that they had held the medals for a year.

Mrs. John A. Morrill presided at the exercises in the absence of Mrs. C. E. Abbott, regent of the local chapter of the D. R., who was detained at home by the serious illness of her father.

The afternoon program included the singing of America and the salute to the flag as well as an address on "What my community has done for me and what I should do for my community," by Frederick Holmes of the Punched hall school faculty. Mr. Holmes spoke of the wonderful age of invention and progress in which the present generation is living with its great opportunities in many new fields of endeavor, and urged his hearers to find their place in the world and fill it to the best of their ability.

The prize essays will be printed in next week's issue.

At daybreak Monday morning he set out in his stocking feet and walked almost two miles to the Reading road where he went to the gasoline filling station to tell his story.

By means of the telephone in the Barton house across the street he was able to reach his parents and notify the police.

The Andover police were assisted in their search by several local young men including Pat Doherty, Joseph Cole, Patrick McBride, David Vannett, John Green, Mike Donovan and David Gillespie as well as by the parents.

TWO DROWNED SUNDAY

West Newton Boys Lose Lives in Icy Waters of Foster's Pond When Leaky Boat Sinks

The bodies of the two West Newton boys who were drowned Sunday at Foster's pond were recovered shortly before two o'clock Tuesday afternoon by the Andover police following a day of unsuccessful search on Monday.

The youths who lost their lives were Loring Carley, 16, son of J. Cheever Carley of 27 Elliot avenue, West Newton, and his cousin, Raymond Carley, son of Edward H. Carley of 338 Cherry street, West Newton. Loring was a first-year student in Newton vocational high school, while the other was a pupil in the Pierce school in West Newton.

A third boy, Frederick A. Reichert, 16, of 12 Raymond place, West Newton was able to swim ashore after the sinking of the boat in which the boys were crossing the pond.

The three boys arrived by automobile at the pond on Sunday planning to spend several days of their school vacation at the camp owned by Edward Carley situated on an inlet near the Wilmington shore.

About noon the boys started out in a steel boat supposed to be non-sinkable to set muskrat traps in the swamps about the pond. The boat had been lying out all winter and the freezing of water in the compartments had sprung the seams so that constant bailing was necessary. When the middle of the pond was reached the boat filled and the boys were thrown into the water. Young Reichert, who was able to shake off his rubber boots started to swim for the shore. When he looked around neither of his companions were in sight and after swimming about the spot where the boat went down in a vain endeavor to assist the other boys, he finally reached the shore near the Cushman camp in a state of exhaustion. Having lain on the ground until he had gathered some strength he walked around the inlet to the camp where he built a fire. By this time night had fallen and as it was his first visit to the camp he had no idea in what direction to venture forth in search of help.

At daybreak Monday morning he set out in his stocking feet and walked almost two miles to the Reading road where he went to the gasoline filling station to tell his story.

By means of the telephone in the Barton house across the street he was able to reach his parents and notify the police.

The Andover police were assisted in their search by several local young men including Pat Doherty, Joseph Cole, Patrick McBride, David Vannett, John Green, Mike Donovan and David Gillespie as well as by the parents.

Over two hundred members of the South Church Men's Club and their lady guests spent a very enjoyable evening in the vestry of the church last night when the club held its annual ladies' night. The South church quartet, made up of Evelyn Alice Ford, Leona Blanche Albrecht, Arthur W. Bassett and Lawrence Bottomly, with Edgar, E. Vose at the piano, sang delightfully several well received selections, "Voices of the Spring," Rubenstein-Watson; and as an encore "Dina" by John. Miss Ford, soprano, pleased with her singing of "I Love Thee," by Greig and as an encore gave Troubadour's "Oh My Lady." Lawrence Bottomly, bass, sang "When Bright Eyes Glance" and as an encore "Rolling Down to Rio."

Pitt Parker, so excellently advertised by the club secretary, exceeded even that gentleman's promise of excellence and scored a very decided hit with his caricatures of two of the town's more prominent citizens. Roosevelt, Taft and other well-known personages grew from the deft strokes of his crayon. The final drawing, a reproduction in colors of Mt. Tahomah with a tiny mountain lake in the foreground, illustrated the versatility of the artist and brought "Ohs" and "Ahs" from the audience.

Previous to the entertainment a short business meeting was held; two new members were elected, bringing the total membership of the club to 177, and the nominating committee for the year was chosen; Nathan C. Hamblin, Chester W. Holland and W. H. Thompson. This committee will bring in nominations for the officers of the next year at the next regular meeting.

At the close of the evening's entertainment, President Hammond announced that a secret meeting had been held for the election of waiters for the evening and announced the election of the following: W. H. Foster, W. H. Thompson, C. D. Abbot, Harold Austin, E. M. Weeks, Austin Wade, Allison Morse, Arthur Jenkins, Fred Cheney, George Hussey, G. M. Holmes. Tables were arranged to accommodate everyone comfortably and the able corps served fruit salad, saltines, cake, crackers and coffee. Mrs. E. V. Bigelow and Mrs. E. H. Ryley handled things in the kitchen in their usual efficient manner.

Good Friday Music in the Chapel of Phillips Academy

Ten Nights in a Barroom

Mrs. L. Case Russell, the author of the modern version of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," has had to wait a long time for the honor and the profit of a first class screen success. She has written four or five hundred photoplays and is at the head of her profession.

But in modernizing the old fictional and stage success, "Ten Nights in a Barroom," Mrs. Russell was seized by an inspiration, one of those things that occasionally comes to an author—a turn at something for which the public is waiting. The public is waiting for "Ten Nights in a Barroom" on the screen.

Mrs. Russell is fortunate in the director of her story, Mr. Oscar Apfel, who has made a great drama of it. Then she is fortunate in the fact that the incomparable John Lowell plays the part of Joe Morgan, who goes to the bar, and is redeemed by the love of his wife and the tender spiritual influence of his little daughter, who loses her life in a drunken brawl.

Although the scene of the play is laid in Cedarville in America, it is true to life all over the world; the barroom, happily abolished here, is omnipresent elsewhere. You see it in London, Paris, Manchester, Liverpool, Sydney, Cape Town, Alexandria; it is all over the world. Joe Morgan is a common type. How many men, we wonder, have gone to the devil by means of drink? How few of them have been reclaimed by the influence of a little girl. Their own child maddened through drink! The writer of this article can recall very many scenes in various parts of the world exactly resembling those shown in the picture. Most traveled men of the world can do the same.

But for all that, "Ten Nights in a Barroom" is not a lecture on the evils of drink—drink only appears incidentally. It is a great story with a heart interest appeal. It is the child interest that is so strong; both the mother love and the redemption of the errant father hold our interest when we look at this picture.

The picture will be shown at the Colonial theatre on Monday and Tuesday, April 10-11.

TREMONT TEMPLE

Another famous story by Alexandre Dumas, the French writer, has provided the scenario for a screen production which is now scoring a marked success in its world premiere at the Tremont Temple in Boston. This is the widely-read story "Monte Cristo," said by many to be a classic of adventure, romance and love.

The screen version of the story was produced at the William Fox West Coast studios under the direction of Emmett J. Flynn, the man who directed that famous screen comedy, "A Connecticut Yankee". "Monte Cristo" is a costly production in ten reels, and will not be shown in New England again this season.

Millions have read the Dumas story of the adventures of Edmond Dantes, the young French sailor of Marseilles, France. The screen version holds quite true to the original story and depicts in a vivid manner the unfaithfulness of Dantes' friends; his sentence to prison; his subsequent escape and the revenge which he sought on those who had wronged him. It is possible through the scope of the motion picture camera to carry the audience to France and give such a portrayal of the characters as to make them what the famous Dumas would have had them.

Not the least important in the success of "Monte Cristo" is the all-star cast which handles the various difficult roles. It is headed by John Gilbert, a young actor who may be said to score a personal triumph in this production. The role of Mercedes, Dantes' sweetheart, was given to Estelle Taylor; the role of the King's prosecutor to Robert McKim, well-known screen villain. William V. Moon, one of the most famous of character actors, has the role of Caderousse, the innkeeper. Spottiswoode Aitken, veteran character actor, has the role of the Abbe Faria who proves to be the benefactor of the young sailor. Other players, well-known to followers of screen productions, who have important roles, are Virginia Fair, Maude George, George Seismann, Ralph Cloninger, Albert Prisco, Harry Lonsdale, Gaston Glass, and others.

"Monte Cristo" on April 10, starts in on its fifth successful week at the Tremont Temple. The admission prices are in keeping with the usual prices charged there.

Democracy vs. Absolutism

It cannot fail to be a source of enlightenment to the voters of Andover to be frankly told by the Chairman of the Board of Public Works that there is a distinction between individual liberty and public improvements. Nowhere on earth does "individual liberty" find so decisive and complete expression as in our New England town meeting. Here, as the writer pointed out in a previous article, rich and poor, black and white, learned and ignorant, men and women, are given a legal power to determine town policies, town improvements, and the expenditure of the town's money. This is the "legacy" bequeathed to us by the long centuries of struggle upon the "bloody battlefields."

The curse of this world has been the ambition for absolute power and its usurpation, either by one man, as in the case of Alexander, Caesar, Louis XIV or Napoleon, or by a group of men, as in the case of the aristocratic senators of Rome, the feudal lords and their vassals; and, in our own day, the wealthy barons who control our Congress and hold a mortgage upon our coal and meat, and the great necessities of our daily existence. Each of these men, and small groups of men, as in the case of the philosophy of our esteemed correspondent. With them there was "no relation between individual liberty" and what they wanted done. Their superior "knowledge and insight" gave them the right to rule.

Today this same right is claimed for our town officials by our friend, Mr. Rhodes. According to him the very fact of holding an official position imparts to its holder a superiority in "knowledge and insight." Here we have a succinct, frank, and unequivocal statement of "the principle of public officials occupy their knowledge and insight ought to be in advance of public knowledge and insight and their action ought to precede public action." There is no relation between the loss of individual freedom and the development of a community. Here we have a succinct, frank, and unequivocal statement of "the principle of town government as it lies in the mind of the Chairman of the Board of Public Works. In substance, he says: The policies of town government should be determined by town officials, not by the people; there is "no relation" between the action of the "officials" and the free expression of the "individuals." The officials' superiority of "knowledge and insight," lift them head and shoulders above all other men and women of Andover, so much so as to make it a matter of no importance whether they exercise by vote their "individual freedom" or not.

It would certainly be a sad day for Andover if our correspondent were believed to be uttering other than his own personal convictions. The writer knows of no other town official who arrogates to himself such superior "knowledge and insight." The fundamental thesis of "Daniel Webster's Reply to Haynes" was that "Sovereignty resided in the people, and not in those chosen by the people." The town officials should regard themselves as servants of Andover, not its masters. "L'etat, c'est moi!" said Louis XIV. "La ville, c'est moi!" says Mr. Rhodes.

In Judge Cox's talk to the schools he urged the young people to guard jealously their "legacy" of individual freedom. He realized that indifference to "individual liberty" invariably issues in usurpation of power. In the days of the Roman Republic this want of appreciation led the voters to sell their vote to the highest bidder. Caesar paid $1,500,000 for these votes and by them bought his way into the Senate and on up to a throne. Thus it has always been, and it will always be; as in a nation, so in a small town like Andover.

Eternal vigilance is the price of democracy. It was the refusal of nine-tenths of the 3,494 voters of Andover at our last town meeting that the writer deplored, and not the "cost of democracy" as our Correspondent twisted the statement to mean. Not the conscientious voters, but the indifferent non-voters were unpatriotic.

The "knowledge and insight" of our entire citizenry are needed to solve our town problems—problems greater and more complex than those of any other town in the State. Broad common sense, as well as technical knowledge, should have a voice in our town improvements, and the writer is confident that the greater majority, at least, of our officials would hardly arrogate to themselves a complete monopoly of this virtue.

Not want of common sense, nor of "knowledge and insight" makes of no concern the "loss of individual liberty" here in Andover's town meeting, but the utter indifference of its citizens to its public concerns. It is this that causes us to "follow a leader blindly, vote a straight party ticket, or to settle the whole matter in the light of what Mrs. Neighbor's sister's husband was told by a 'big man' privately."

More and more the affairs of Andover are left in the hands of a small group of men. On their shoulders rest the responsibilities and the necessary work. The most vital concerns of our town are decided by a few men who receive for their services the reward that comes only from the consciousness of service well performed. Heaven knows who would assume these responsibilities and do the necessary planning if they did not. Long continuance in office, long accustomed to plan and work for the town interest, what wonder if, in time, they come to look upon the average voter as a negligible quantity and assume prerogatives far beyond their original intentions; what wonder if the citizens, long accustomed to think responsibility, and to delegate their tasks to others, should finally grow indifferent, uninformed, and helpless. Few men will long shoulder responsibility without claiming the power that goes with it. This is said, not in criticism of the men in power, but of the great body of shirkers who force power into their hands. The power still resides with the people; they share "knowledge and insight" with our esteemed Chairman of the Board of Public Works. Will they use it?

N. H. is now making Middlebrook Farm the home of a hand-wrought iron industry, the products of which have found favor with the Arts and Crafts society of Boston. The Middlebrook blacksmith, a man with unusual skill in the use of tools is able to work in iron, leaving on the foot scrapers, trivets, and tongs, an individual touch characteristic of the workman and giving these humble articles a peculiar distinction.

A beautiful collection of china was shown by Mrs. Fred Wallace. To her skill as a creator of beautiful things in hand-painted china and luster were which have been so much admired on former occasions, Mrs. Wallace has added the accomplishment of enamelled work on china of which she showed some charming examples. She recommends the art as a diversion from the ordinary routine of housekeeping.

An interesting bedspread designed for a four-poster was shown by Miss Shapleigh. The material was blue Canadian homespun embroidered in white with a motif after an old French 16th century design.

Mrs. Sawyer who is interested in reviving the almost lost art of netting, drew attention to the exhibit of Colonial tufted bed spreads arranged under netted canopies. She said that although this art was associated with Colonial times, examples of the work five or six thousand years old have been found in caves in Arizona.

Crocheted hemp rugs in the natural color combined with blue or dark brown were also shown. These were of special interest not only because they make a practical floor covering but because the material of which they are made is manufactured by the Smith and Dove company.

An opportunity was given Mr. Barlow of Lowell to present the cause of the Good Will Industries, a part of the Morgan Memorial work for which he made a straightforward and earnest appeal. The Good Will bag is a receptacle for every article discarded by the housewife. During the last year 6000 of these bags have been distributed and collected through a center established at Lowell. The sorting and repairing of their contents have furnished $4000 worth of work for which $8,400 was paid, and the contents have been sold, bringing in an income of $1,000 a month. The bags to be taken home were distributed during the intermission at noon.

A talk on the planning and planting of a perennial garden by Miss Katharine Selden, a graduate of the Cambridge School of Landscape architecture was full of interest for the makers of gardens. The two principles which she laid down were to treat the composition of the garden as a whole, and to have a central theme dominating it and hindering it together. These principles she elaborated upon, making suggestions for the arrangement of paths, grass plots and borders, the mixing of colors, plans for changing the garden color as the season advances and methods of obtaining effects of distance and of light and shade by color planting. She also gave out a list of the new improved varieties of perennials, many of which will doubtless bloom in Andover gardens this summer. Much mental and physical effort can be spent on a successful perennial garden, but Miss Selden assured her hearers that they would be well repaid for all such effort expended.

The remainder of the morning session was occupied by five-minute talks on garden experiences by local amateurs. The first of these speakers was Miss Bessie P. Goldsmith who told of the pleasure to be derived from a wild garden. Mrs. Harry Clark brought greetings from the Garden Club of North Andover. Opportunities for visiting gardens, talks by out-of-town as well as local speakers, followed by a social hour have made this garden club all a delightful place in the life of that community.

Observations on the habits of the chickadees and finches as noted while they were taking advantage of the privileges of a "free lunch counter" provided for them outside the window of the family dining room were most felicitously recounted by Miss Jane Carpenter. "No cinema picture," said she, "can compare with a close-up of a baby finch trying to crack a sunflower seed."

Some of her enthusiasm for Mrs. Peirson S. Page who feels that her financial investment, although somewhat larger than she originally intended, has brought a rich return both in honey and a new outdoor interest. Bench-grown roses were the subject chosen by Mrs. William A. Trow who has been a successful grower of this queen of flowers.

An illustrated lecture on Forest Hills, a garden suburb of New York, by Percival Gallagher of Olmstead Brothers filled the afternoon session, as Miss Helen Holmes was prevented by illness from reporting for the National Farm and Garden association. Mr. Gallagher is the representative of Olmstead Brothers who for the last twenty years has had charge of the placing of every building, tree and shrub on the Phillips academy campus.

Garden City, Long Island is a development undertaken by the Russell Sage Homes company as a concrete example of what it is possible to accomplish in improving the amenities of life for the suburban dweller of moderate circumstances. The company which purchased a tract of nearly 200 acres in 1910 changed the original layout, which followed the conventional rectangles of city blocks, according to a plan which would give an opportunity for greater variety of construction, neighborhoods away from direct traffic lines, spaces for recreation and grass plots about the houses. No initial expense for excellent water and sewerage systems was spared. The buildings including the railroad station, inn, apartment houses and single dwellings follow one general style with steep red roofs and many dormers with clipped gables reminiscent of German architecture. The placing of the buildings is carefully restricted by deed so that tenants are assured of space and sun and light. Plantings of trees, shrubbery, and perennials contribute to a harmonious whole.

A fine community spirit has also developed; holidays, tennis tournaments and the celebration of other gala occasions serve to draw the people together. Soon after the development of the property began, transportation facilities were greatly improved so that the Pennsylvania station may be reached in only fifteen minutes. This Russell Sage Homes company was organized as a business venture with an educational purpose and having accomplished its end recently sold out to a corporation many of whose stockholders are residents of Forest Hills.

The lecture was illustrated by many lantern slides, which gave an excellent idea of the attractions of the garden city. Arthur W. Leonard kindly assisted the lecturer by operating the lantern.

Between the hours of one o'clock and half past two a delicious catered lunch was served under the direction of Mrs. John M. Stewart. She was assisted by Mrs. Henry A. Bodwell, Mrs. Frank Hardy, Mrs. J. Harry Kicker, Mrs. Fredric Chandler, Mrs. J. J. Mahoney, Mrs. Mitchell Johnson, Mrs. C. W. Scott and Miss Grace P. S. Clemens. The members of the general committee were Mrs. James C. Sawyer, chairman; Mrs. William A. Trow in charge of exhibits; Mrs. Addison B. LeBoutillier assisted by Mrs. N. E. Bartlett, decorations; Mrs. John M. Stewart, caterer; and Mrs. George L. Selden.

Monday's conference was the most successful ever held by the November club, both morning and afternoon sessions being largely attended. Many guests were present from Haverhill, Lawrence and North Andover.

Italy's Civic Centres

Grand Hotel Flora
Rome 25

February 13, 1932

To the Editor of the Andover Townsman:

Dear Sir:

This afternoon when the Townsman of January 20 was found in our letter box, Mr. Poynter and I had a friendly scrap over who should have it first—and ended by dividing it, settling down to our tea and the Townsman, so absorbed that we were quite unconscious of the lively Italian conversation close to our ears, and the delightful Italian music in the next room. The Townsman has followed us on our rambles since August, and is greeted with a like cordial welcome whenever it arrives.

It is getting near Town Meeting time, and perhaps the question of a suitable memorial and new Town House will again be up for discussion. As I have thought a lot about it in these last few months, perhaps you'll let me reach some of my fellow Andoverians in this way.

I've been interested in a Civic centre for Andover for some time—both because the Town Hall can no longer seat the voters, and because we want some appropriate record of our appreciation of Andover's soldiers in this last great war. But I've never been so keen about it as since I've seen the little towns of Italy and what they have to hold the civic pride of their people. As we have gone from place to place, I've been amazed and almost awed by what are now not only town monuments, but national monuments to the civic pride and to the sense of beauty and fitness of almost every town in Italy. Perugia, Siena, Viterbo—not the great towns but the small ones; Perugia and Siena have from twenty to twenty-five thousand inhabitants so we'll not talk of them, but of San Gimignano which has not much over four thousand.

It is a fascinating walled town, perched loftily on a great hill rising abruptly from the surrounding valley, no railroad nearer than seven miles. I suppose one might say there are two civic centres in San Gimignano for just outside one of the gates are Le Fonti—which is the public wash house! The housewives have no running water in their houses, but in the thirteenth century the town built great stone troughs in series, supplied from springs, and there the women go, great fat buckets piled with their week's wash balanced nicely on their heads. There is one civic centre.

But the other, the "Palazzo Comunale" which is their town house, would delight the eyes of any man or woman who loves good proportions, graceful towers, pointed Gothic windows, nice brick work, touches of beautiful stone carving. This building was erected in 1288. "Did it cost a lot?" "I don't know, but I expect it did." "Who cared about it today?" "You ask any street urchin." "What is there to see in San Gimignano?" Instantly civic pride lights his face and he eagerly offers to take you to the Palazzo Comunale. That Palazzo is not only beautiful and satisfying architecturally, but it has frescoes by famous Renaissance painters, it has wonderful wood work—inlaid wood making pictures, it has precious records of all these years, it has the chair where Dante sat when he came as ambassador to the town from Florence. And now people come from all over the world to see the civic centre of a little town of 4000 people.

When we build our civic centre, let's not be so niggardly that we save the difference between an ugly building without proper setting, and one that will be a joy to the eyes of ourselves, our visitors, and all the generations which are to come after us. We are so young in America that we forget that we are not building for ourselves alone but for those who will be coming after us even unto the year 2022—and beyond.

The Women's club of the Andover Grange held a very successful food and apron sale Friday afternoon in J. H. Playdon's florist shop on Main street. The weather made no difference for the good things made by the famous Grange cooks were speedily disposed of. The apron table also had many customers.

The sale netted a goodly sum. Those in charge were Miss Charlotte M. Hill, president of the club, Mrs. J. Warren Moore and Mrs. Edward W. Burt.

A Fine Newspaper Service

The month that has just closed marked many memorable events, but at least for the city of Malden it gave an anniversary flavor to no factor in the life of the city of equal importance to the recognition of the thirtieth birthday of the Malden News.

We doubt if the students of newspapers would class that publication as a great newspaper, and yet it is interesting to analyze the word "great" in connection with any element in the force of a community and particularly if that element happens to be a newspaper. We look upon the Malden News as a great newspaper in every sense of the word, because the measure of its standard should only be the service it renders to its particular field, and this has been a rare service in the relation of the News to the city of Malden.

If we were to reduce that service to a single word we would say that the News has been a "human" newspaper; knowing the strength of its people, and their frailties; in some cases realizing its responsibility for Malden's development without being too strongly opinionated; being strongly opinionated in other cases because it did realize its responsibility; asserting the personality of a man of courage who loves his community; knowing that prosperity for him comes through honestly serving his community, and knowing that greater prosperity for the community will come if he makes his paper of increasing strength and of greater ability to serve.

Congratulations to Editor Bayrd of the Malden News, but much more do we congratulate the city on possessing the editor and his publication that so well knows Malden and so well serves Malden.

Some More "Well Done" Duty

We are hearing a lot these days about men doing their duty, and one cannot help wondering if there is prevalent a fair estimate of values in estimating duty done, particularly as those values are reflected in newspaper headlines. For example, a distinguished public official in Massachusetts has had more headlines in the last year than all of his associates, including his Chief, put together. Probably from the standards of news value, these headlines may have been justified, but it would have been quite possible with a prejudiced press taking a different view of the situation, to so have manipulated the headlines as to make a very different impression upon the public than they have up to the present time. There is considerable evidence throughout the Commonwealth that the man of achievement is the man whose reputation has been built by newspaper headline writers, even more than it has been built by any definite action.

Let us take a contrasting case in which we believe more service has been rendered to the cause of justice, to the importance of asserting the true power of the courts, than even through the action which has resulted in deposing from office men who were not true to their oaths. Two men of a foreign race were charged with the crime of murder, convicted by a trial in which vast sums of money were spent for legal defense, in connection with which it became almost impossible to secure a jury because of intimidation, threats, and a reign of terror that led hundreds of homes in Norfolk county to fear for the lives of one or more of their inmates. The trial was conducted by Judge Webster Thayer, and the prosecution enforced by District Attorney Frederick G. Katzmann. Subjected to all kinds of threats, it would have been the easiest thing in the world for them, by ruling or by not doing certain things, to work out from under the complications that were associated with doing duty. International complications arose in connection with the case and legal questions of vast import have been presented and argued. From every angle, the case represents the very last word in pressure of the most vicious sort to restrain high officials from doing their full duty.

We have seen no headlines about these two men. On the contrary most of the headlines have been associated with the vicious attempts that have been made to nullify their adherence to duty and their insistence upon the law taking its full course whatever the personal cost might be. What a vast amount of nonsense we are seeing when we think of the type of high minded public service that Judge Thayer and District Attorney Katzmann have rendered, without a word of acclaim on the part of the public, and with no thought on their part of capitalizing this splendid public service by any one of a dozen cheap methods that might be followed.

Verily, it is a doubtful value that is placed upon the work of a public official when it is reflected in the daily appeal to public passion and prejudice, that has no other purpose than the sale of the newspaper!

Editorial Cinders

How hath the mighty fallen! The Springfield Republican reduces its price to one cent per copy, and there are people in western Massachusetts who used to look upon this publication as the Bible of that section of the State. Of course all the other papers have come into line and now you can buy any one of the Springfield publications for a penny. To some people this will represent a lessened cost for their news, but to those who are acquainted with the situation it will represent an additional burden to the consumer because the advertising must carry the load. We have a notion that the Springfield Republican has reduced its price to a cent because it cannot sell it any longer at two cents, just as it reduced it to two cents because it could not sell it at three cents. This, however, is not the reason for the reduced price of the Union. While the Republican has been going down, the Union has been coming up very rapidly, and we don't like to think of having it cheapen its standing by fixing this penny standard. Perhaps it is none of the business of a newspaper so far away from Springfield, but long-time education that has taught all the newspaper men of the State to have respect for opinions that come from Springfield, makes most of us hope that the standard of those opinions may continue, because of the influence they have upon other newspapers and communities other than Springfield.

We commend to our readers' attention the communications that are appearing from the pen of Mr. Frost, and those from other correspondents. We don't commend them because we approve of all the things that are said, but we do very heartily approve of the discussion which they open up, and the natural tendency of those who read them to become better informed regarding the matters that are discussed. The writer has not been able to take the time to thoroughly analyze Mr. Frost's communications which have been rather definitely directed toward him, but let the readers of the Townsman be a bit patient, for such answer is sure to come within a short time. Meanwhile it is to be hoped that not all the statements made by Mr. Frost will be taken at 100% valuation and needless to say the same admonition, if necessary, would be made regarding the answers that the writer may prepare. This thing is true, however; on the one hand the public is being led to take a view of the Andover situation from the eyes of a gentleman who appears to be very much of a pessimist; on the other hand the writer hopes that such comments as he makes on affairs in Andover are properly colored with the optimism that he feels regarding the town, its past, present and future.

Most of us will regret that it has been found necessary to hold a special town meeting. Apparently the safe procedure, as advised by the town council, is evidenced by the call for the special meeting on April 15. Not a single report is ready upon subjects that the special meeting was supposed to discuss, hence we do hope that the selectmen will find some way to advise the citizens so that they may stay at home and feel confident that no action will be taken in any snap way, but that adjournment will be made to a time when the matters of interest will be ready for discussion.

Site for Shawheen School Not Chosen

Discussion of the Shawheen Village school problem occupied the greater part of the session when the school committee convened for its regular monthly meeting on Tuesday evening.

The committee has made a thorough survey of the situation but has been unable to find a suitable site for the proposed schoolhouse which is in the market. Because of this condition, no specific recommendation can be made in the article prepared for the town warrant.

A joint meeting of members of the school committee and the selectmen will be held this evening to prepare a report to present at a special town meeting to be held on April 15, in accordance with a vote taken at the annual town meeting held March 13.

The fact that no positive action has been taken by the school committee will delay the building of the schoolhouse for some time but the committee feels that the matter should have the fullest consideration. If the number of pupils increases so rapidly that they cannot be accommodated in the present building, undoubtedly some hall in the village can be used to tide over an emergency.

In the absence of Chairman Roy H. Bradford, who is ill, Dr. E. C. Conroy was the presiding officer.

The election of teachers was held and the present force retained. There were a few slight increases in salary given the lowest paid teachers.

Death

In Andover, April 6, 1922, Daniel L. Whipple, aged 82 years 6 days.

Etchings at John Esther Gallery

An unusual opportunity is afforded Andover art lovers in the last exhibition, at the John Esther Gallery of Abbot Andover, of eight choice etchings belonging to Mrs. John Towle, about twenty prints from Frederick Keppel and Company, New York, three etchings from Mr. Addison LeBoutillier and a Pennell lithograph from Miss Martha Hovey.

Mrs. Towle's etchings include a Rembrandt, as Whistler, a Zorn, a Seymour Haden, two Hornbys, a Bubot and a portrait of the poet Yeats by Augustus John.

The Zorn example is Valkulla, the peasant girl sitting in a doorway, and Whistler's work is represented by a fine proof of Reading by Lamplight, with its extraordinary effect of light and shadow. Hornby's two women at the theater are human documents sketched in few words.

John, an English artist of influence today, is further shown in a group of etchings from Keppel's. French work is illustrated by examples of Corot, Millet, Manet, Pissarro and Steinlen, who is called the master of the Paris streets, and the Millet of the trenches, but who has here portrayed cats — very black cats — of personality.

Other prints are by Arthur B. Davies, very much the vogue at present, who seems to use a combination of aquatint and etching; Herman A. Webster, loaned by Mr. LeBoutillier; and two of Mr. LeBoutillier's own characteristic New Hampshire scenes — with their own special charm — which have not been exhibited in Andover before.

The large lithograph by Pennell is of the war period, representing a cantonment, but with a spaciousness and calm about it much more suggestive of peace. The exhibition will be open for at least two weeks, and possibly longer, on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons from two until five o'clock.

Fish and Bird Movie and Lecture

Through the kindness of the Andover Fish and Game Club, a large audience had the pleasure of listening to Orrin C. Bourne in the town hall Wednesday evening, when he delivered a lecture on the activities of the state commission of fish and game, illustrated with movies. State director W. C. Adams, who presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker of the evening, told several of his own "fish" stories in so doing.

The movies showed many interesting scenes of the hatcheries and bird farms of this and other states, pictures of hunting on the shores of Cape Cod, in the Berkshires and the hunting of the various migratory birds wild duck, mallard duck and Canadian geese.

AGNES PARK

Agnes Park was born July 6, 1845, in the old brick house next the Archaeological building on Andover hill. She was the daughter of Edwards A. Park and his wife Maria Edwards, the great-granddaughter of Jonathan Edwards. At the time of her birth her father was Professor of Sacred Rhetoric in Andover Theological Seminary, and became later, and for many years, its President. She was educated entirely in Andover, first in the school of an old family friend, Mrs. B. B. Edwards, held in what is now the house of Judge Chandler on Main street, and later at Abbot Academy. In 1871 she went abroad for a year with Mrs.
Edwards, and came back to live steadily at home, gradually taking on more and more household care until her mother died in 1893, and eight years later her father. From that time on a succession of Phillips Academy students have had rooms in the house.
Until eighteen months ago, when a painful lameness in her hip developed, she had always had vigorous health. Her last sickness was short and relatively without suffering, and she died in the house in which she was born, on March 23, 1922.With the exception of the European year and an occasional visit, Miss Park spent all her seventy-six years on Andover hill, without any occupation outside her own doors; yet everyone who knew her, or even met her casually, recognized the sense of unlimited activity and variety in her life which she herself felt. Its secret was in her capacity to enjoy people. Anything that had to do with people interested her, and Andover has always been filled with men and women who would interest a far more demanding person. She liked all ages—her father's and mother's friends, her own contemporaries, and as years passed, the younger generation. She was a good neighbor, because she loved her neighbor much more than herself. She liked the friendly runnings-in with a gift of flowers or the loan of a book; she kept up with the doings of all her friends; she liked to see newcomers, and to give them a welcome into Andover homes and activities. She never lost the art of letter writing, and no pen could set out as hers did the news of the day on the Hill. When there were no people to be considered, she could be absorbed by books, or her garden; but she always liked people best.Outside of her house and her neighbors, she connected herself with every kind of town activity. She was a suffragist from the beginning of the movement, a member of the Andover Historical Society, one of the charter members of the November Club and once its President, for many years until her death the head of the literature department, a member of the dramatic department of the Club, and of the Barnard society, and for many years
secretary-treasurer of the Abbot Academy Alumni Association. Her interest in all these varied organizations was no passive one. To the end of her life she threw herself into her work with the vim of a young girl. Everything was done, from acting to the humdrum duties of a treasurer, at full steam, and with an infectious enthusiasm.
There are many people who will agree that in the circle of their acquaintance no one got more interest or pleasure in the things of the moment than Miss Park. She was interested in the past, but in its relation to the present, not for itself. She was never hide-bound in her reading, her interests, or her opinions. Dear as the Andover of the past had been to her, she never let it cast its spell on her; she threw herself with all her might into the interests of the present Andover, and indeed the interests of the present day.
Someone has written of her: "She was actually what we should like to think real New Englanders are—cultivated, capable, sympathetic, honest, unafraid."

JAMES ISAAC ANDERSON

James Isaac Anderson, a native of Andover and a brother of John S. Anderson and Mrs. J. P. Wakefield of this town died after a brief illness with pneumonia on March 17 at his home in Colorado Springs, Colorado.
Mr. Anderson was born in Andover, May 8, 1844 and answering President Lincoln's first call for volunteers enlisted from Andoverwith Company H, Massachusetts Heavy Artillery. He served through the entire duration of the war, being mustered out in 1865.
In the following year he married, and with his young wife went to Leavenworth, Kansas and later to Smith Center where he took up the first soldier's and first citizen's claim in

Siftings

The beauty of a garden is not by any means visible to the casual observer even though he be himself a maker of gardens. He may see the well-cut borders, the masses of color, the perfect specimen flowers, but much that is lovely is visible only to the owner who sees with the eye of imagination what is hardly suggested to the uninitiated. This is particularly true of my wild garden which is made up largely of early spring flowers, their delicate beauty springing miraculously out of the warming earth which but a few short weeks before was a sodden mass of leaf mould from which the last reluctant ice and snow has withdrawn its dirty mantle.

These wild flowers come year after year, flourishing in a sunny corner with heart-warming faithfulness encouraged by only the most casual care—a rooting out of the which grass and the more persistent weeds in the very early spring, as their mid-summer luxuriance of foliage discourages any of the less hardy weeds. For ten, twenty, thirty, and even forty years these same roots have warmed under the spring sunshine and sent forth leaf and blossom and will for many years to come unless disturbed by vandals, grudging or so-called improvements.

One of the first things to show in my garden is the beautiful spotted leaf of the dog tooth violet pushing through the dead grass and leaves on a bank with a warm southern exposure. These are followed in a short time by the nodding yellow blossoms which drop unconsciously on a dull day, but under the hot spring sunshine curl back their lily-like sepals, making the flower look all alive as if it might take to its wings and fly away. There do I see not only my modest little garden but the lovely wooded river bank in West Andover with the Merrimack rushing by at spring flood where we often enjoy our early spring picnics and whence these flowers were transplanted many, many years ago. Strangely enough they like their new home so well that they reward me with as many blossoms in my small patch as may often be found in a quarter of an acre in its native haunts.

Near by is the blood root which surprises us with a few scattering flowers and later grows into a white sheet of bloom where its strong growth pushes out every other form of vegetation, even the encroaching grass. The children of the neighborhood sometimes steal in grasping eagerly at the star-like flowers only to throw them down in utter disgust when they find their hands stained with the dark red juice from its stems.

Then there is the mandrake or May apple, usually found south of New England, whose unfolding umbrella-like leaves springing from its crested rootstock, present in May the unseasonable appearance of a frost-bitten squash vine. The white blossoms are as inconspicuous as those of our common wake robin and the so-called apples seldom mature.

Scattered here and there in the grass are stray plants of an early forget-me-not which though not a perennial has with a remarkable persistency needed itself from plants which came from the garden of Mrs. Annie Sawyer Downes, now covered with apartment houses. Later in the season the water forget-me-not in a damp place by the fence struggles into bloom, an inconspicuous bit of color but suggesting to its owner the sources of the Connecticut river below the slopes of Mount Magalloway whence it was pulled several years ago.

The little group of trillium, the more common cormus, the red, the painted, and the sessile varieties are all that remain, so far as I know, of the wild garden started by Albert Moore and Arthur Stanley Pease, who as boys made a serious study of Andover flora before engaging in their more serious scientific pursuits of later years.

The inconspicuous little dark red flower of the wild ginger hangs the ground hardly noticeable and soon entirely concealed by its woolly, kidney-shaped leaves, a thing with no pretensions to beauty but interesting because of its aromatic, pungent creeping root. The squirrel corn was a gift from a friend whose home was in northern New Hampshire and though it has persisted in living for ten years or more blossoms only sparingly. The delicate spring beauty which accompanied it on its pilgrimage lasted only a few years and bloomed but twice.

The yellow violets came from the Tyler grounds before they became the site of the parochial school and together with the blue violets run riot over everything when their season is at its height.

The Jack-in-the-pulpit are almost hoary with age and build their pulpit of more generous proportions each succeeding year. Of all the spring flowers in this corner, only the Jack-in-the-pulpit attracts attention in the fall of the year when, in the wreckage of the garden as we are clearing up for the winter we spy its scarlet fruit.

The delicate basket of the wild oats once grew in the gutter beside the Old Railroad before a passion for clearing up or the necessity of widening the road for automobiles caused the cleaning out of the wayside shrubbery and the consequent passing of the spring flowers sheltered beneath it. With them came a wandering vine which did not discover itself until April 28, under the direction of Herbert W. Ford, who will also have an important role in the presentation. The play selected is "Dust to the Earth" by Catherine Cavanaugh and is a comedy drama in four acts. The cast is a strong one, including those who have already appeared with success, and several new faces.

Circulation More than One Hundred Books a Day

The number of books issued for home use at the Memorial Hall Library during March was 4,338. Not once did the circulation fall below one hundred books a day, and on five days it exceeded 200, the average being 160. This circulation is not equal to that of March, 1921, but the use of books in the reading-room has been much larger. Never before has the room been so constantly filled with students consulting books at the library instead of taking them home to use. At times, every seat in the room has been occupied, and one evening, thirty small children sat around two tables and shared their chairs. At Balladvale, 641 books were borrowed.

Fined for Oversteering

A collision between an Overland sedan owned by Miss Rita Foley of 17 Buxford street, Lawrence and a machine owned by J. Guassone which took place near Baker's turnout Monday forenoon resulted in considerable damage to both machines, although the passengers were not injured.

Miss Foley was not riding in the car at the time of the accident and was reluctant to reveal the identity of the driver but finally admitted that it was her brother who is a part owner of the machine. The Foley machine was towed to Buchan's garage for repairs.

Foley appeared before Judge Stone in police court Tuesday afternoon and was fined $25 for oversteering.

In a recent proclamation Governor McRae, of Arkansas, declared his belief that the use of tobacco by men and women, from youth up, generation after generation, is contributory to unmistakable and certain degeneracy. He set March 22 as "no-tobacco day," in Arkansas.

An Andover woman tells me that she has the satisfaction of being the humble instrument by which an unemployed ex-serviceman has been made a self-supporting citizen. Impressed by the problem of these men who had done their utmost to serve her as an American woman, she determined to be responsible for placing at least one of them in a position where he could earn his living.

After making inquiries she called at the American Legion office at the State house through which it is said thousands of unemployed pass every week. At the hour when she called, there were twenty or thirty men at the office. From these she chose one whom she took home with her without delay giving him food and shelter in her own home. The next day she was so fortunate as to place him in a position.

Although helping one among thousands doesn't seem to ease the burden an appreciable amount, yet it is the earnest hope that other families will make themselves responsible for at least one man, thus as the good work multiplies, the problem will be nearer solution.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS

Interesting Items From the County School at Hathorne. Helpful Hints to Farmers

The Green & White

The "Green & White," the annual senior publication, has been received from the printer. The book contains pictures of the athletic teams, together with a complete record of all games and other short sketches which are of value to those interested in athletics at this school. A special feature of the book this year has been an accumulation of interesting notes concerning many of the Alumni and there is also a complete directory of the class of 1921. Stories and humorous notes depicting some phases of school life make up the balance of the book.

Spring Millinery Taken Prescience in Home Making Department

The special course open to High School graduates is proving very popular. This course provides an intensive training in all the subjects which a homemaker should know. Practically all women are homemakers in one way or another, and in these days of specialization, no woman has a right to attempt a "job" of any kind without special training for the work. This special free course at Essex gives an opportunity for young women who have graduated from an academic school, to supplement that education, with the special knowledge which makes for better homes and happier families. Spring millinery takes precedent over every thing else in the minds of the Essex girls at this season of the year. The beautiful new colors and fancy trimmings make the millinery class room a most attractive spot, and the students find the millinery period all too short. Soon each girl will be wearing a real up-to-date hat made by herself.

Students Released for Summer Projects

Already 65 students in the Agricultural Department have been released to take up their summer projects on farms. In some cases, they are owners of the projects, and in other cases they are working on progressive up-to-date farms, gardens and other agricultural establishments under direction of competent managers. In addition to this supervision they are visited frequently by their regular project instructors. This form of practical vocational training is gaining in favor rapidly. The students are thus under schoolroom instruction a portion of the year and under practical field instruction the balance of the year. Students send written reports to the School weekly and in addition, keep complete diaries of operations and financial records.

The students of the Homemaking Department are enjoying their regular Spring vacation of one week. They will return on April 10th for the Spring term. This will be followed by the summer project term, similar to that of the Agricultural Department.

Melvin Sverker of Saugus and Karl Wainwright of No. Andover, both members of the senior class, are now working on a large commercial poultry plant at Red Bank, New Jersey. Both boys report that they are much pleased with the work and are loud in praise of the valuable experience which they are gaining.

To Give Course in Bee Keeping

Instructor Wilson will shortly commence a course of instruction in bee-keeping at Lawrence. This has been arranged through the Secretary of the Lawrence Chamber of Commerce and will be open to beekeepers of Lawrence, Methuen and vicinity.

The School has been conducting an adult class in horticulture at Gloucester under the direction of Principal Ireland of the evening High School. Instructor Meigs has had charge of the class and has been assisted by various instructors. Mr. Wilson gave a talk to the class recently on the "Propagation of Plants."

On April 5th, Instructor Wilson gave an illustrated lecture before the Men's Club of the First Church of Danvers. Subject: "Planning, Planting and Care of the Home Grounds."

Delings of "Aggie" Men

Archie L. Pierce of Wenham, is now assistant of the farm of W. Austin Smith, Mt. Pleasant, Peabody, Mass. This is a large productive farm which emphasizes fruit growing. The extensive young orchards of apple and peach are now just coming into bearing. Mr. Pierce takes charge on April 1st. As foreman of the Hale Farm in Rowley, Mr. Pierce showed one of the best managed farms that came to the attention of the writer last year. The management of the School feels very proud to announce the selection of this man as the second superintendent to be placed during the past month.

J. Roy Osborne, Class of 1920, has been travelling through the western states this winter. He has had an opportunity to note and study agricultural conditions and has particularly examined the fruit regions of California, Oregon and Washington. He has always specialized in fruit growing. A very encouraging statement from him is to the effect that Essex County and Massachusetts look especially good to him now as a fruit growing region. When he returns to the home farm in Middleton, we may expect to see the introduction of some of the progressive methods which he has observed in the western country.

Many of the early students will remember George E. Parker. While at Essex, he specialized in livestock studies. Correspondence has just reached us which shows he is now an over-seer in the new Western Pennsylvania State Penitentiary, in charge of the extensive swine herd at that place. Over 400 head are kept. Friends may reach him by addressing, R. F. D. 3, Bellefonte, Pa. George entered school from Lynn.

Watch Out for Scale Insects and Bud Moths

The various forms of bark and fruit scale are troublesome pests on Massachusetts farms and gardens. They are rather inconspicuous but do a tremendous amount of damage, not only to the fruit trees but to the various flowering shrubs, as Japan Flowering Quince, ornamental Poplars and many others. The School will be glad to identify specimens and suggest methods of treatment and control.

It is time to "watch out" for the bud moth in the apple trees. This tiny worm feeds in the opening fruit and flower buds causing complete destruction of both if not checked. Add arsenate of lead to your delayed dormant spray—4 lbs. to 100 gal. of spray, or use it separately spraying first when flower clusters first appear and again before blossoms open.

General Notes

The fertilizing of grass lands and mowings with commercial fertilizers or home mixed fertilizers should be completed at once. Early applications assist the grass to make a thick, heavy bottom growth. We are dependent upon the early Spring rains to properly dissolve and carry the fertilizers to the grass roots.

Fruit men should examine their orchards with great care now to note the injury caused by mice and rabbits. Later injury may result from work of the woodchuck. Wounds which extend to the sapwood should be painted immediately with linseed oil paint or better still, covered with grafting wax. Coning of the soil about the trunk assists the tree greatly. If the injury extends around the trunk, bridge grafting should be resorted to.

The care of lawns at this time of the year is of great importance. Commercial fertilizers or applications of raw materials like wood shavings, ground bone and nitrate of soda, give better results and cause the lawn to take on a splendid, vigorous growth. Lawns may be patched by sowing grass seed over the damaged spots. Grass seed can be well applied mixed with soil. Careful rolling of the lawn will put it in splendid condition for later results.

The mulching on strawberry beds and ornamental borders should be removed with great care. Examination day by day will show when the new growth indicates this removal.

Why not plant a new asparagus bed this Spring? Fifty to one hundred plants should give ample supply for a small household. A bed once established and properly cared for is good for 20 years.

For best results sweet peas should be sowed at once. The slow, cool, steady growth obtained in April, means success in July.

Many a gardener should plow or spade under the leaves, waste plants and coarse manure rather than burning the same. This practice is far better than to burn such material since it will add much to the permanency and future success of the garden.

Lady Astor Will be at the Baltimore Convention

Lady Astor who will attend the Convention of the National League of Women Voters at Baltimore, April 20th to 28th, states that she will say to the Convention that the women of England and America with their common conception of citizenship and morality could achieve any reforms that they set out to accomplish.

Many brilliant women from all parts of the world are to be present assuring that this Conference-Convention will be one of the great international events. From Latin American countries come Senorita Margarita Conroy of Peru who made a name for herself in Red Cross work during the war; Mrs. Carmen de Peñoles, an editor of a Peruvian magazine; Mrs. Emma Lopez de Garrido of Cuba who organized the first woman's club in Cuba and Senorita Pastorian Flores who is the first woman from Ecuador, and possibly the first woman from Latin America to hold the degree of Ph. D. from an American university.

R. C. O. A. Hold Series of Dancing Parties

A very enjoyable dancing party was held by the R. C. O. A. last Friday night in their hall on Park street and despite the storm there was a large attendance, many being present from out of town.

Music was furnished by Weldon's orchestra. Another dance will be held tonight by this popular organization.

The committee was William Davies, Robert Donaldson, Alexander Valentine, Jr., Elmer Eaton and George Coates.

Hearty Eaters Appreciate It

Mrs. Kane Says Sanalt Stopped Great Suffering From Indigestion. Helped Her Children Too

I am a very hearty eater and usually enjoy my meals. My husband says he likes to see me eat, and is willing to get anything the children and I want.
So writes Mrs. P. J. Kane of 14 Darrow Street, New London, Conn., wife of a popular railroad man of that city. Mrs. Kane continues:
But several months ago I became very bilious. I suffered terribly from gas in the stomach. Laxative medicines gave me no relief, but made me sick and nervous. I lost my appetite, or, I guess I was afraid to eat, for the food hurt me so after each meal. I was in pain all the time; everything seemed to be going wrong.
Then a friend suggested that I try "Sanalt the Sensible Tonic," as she called it. In two days after commencing to take Sanalt, I was wonderfully changed for the better. It braced me right up and made all my organs act in a healthy way. My stomach trouble soon passed away and by the time I had taken three bottles of Sanalt I could eat as heartily and enjoy my food as well as ever in my life.
"Since then I have given Sanalt to my boy and girl, with good results, and my husband has been cured of bad headaches, that he has had ever since he was a boy." The majority of druggists sell Sanalt.

ANOTHER GARAGE

Ground Broken for Building on Haverhill street to Have Capacity of 100 Cars

Ground has been broken for a new garage in Shawsheen Village which will be situated adjacent to the restaurant building on Haverhill street. The garage will be three stories high, 228 feet long, 80 feet wide, with bays 25 feet square, nine bays to the floor. It will be of brick and concrete construction similar to the restaurant. Entrance to the first floor will be from Balmoral street and the entrance to the second floor will be from Haverhill street. An elevator from the Balmoral street side will be used to convey passengers and machines to the second and third floors.
The first floor will be used for the storage of trucks and a service station for trucks exclusively and will be the best of its kind in the state. The ground floor will have a capacity of about 35 trucks.
The second floor will be used for pleasure cars and will have liberal capacity for 75 cars.
The third floor will be devoted to storage purposes and truck building and also will be used as a paint shop.
The office and accessory room will be situated in about the middle of the second story and the ladies' room will be to the right of the Haverhill street entrance.
It has been found necessary to build this new garage as the present one has been overcrowded for the past six months. It is expected the new garage will amply take care of the Village for some time to come.

Soccer News

A movement has been started to create more interest in soccer and Secretary John Haggas of the Industrial Soccer League is at the head of the movement. Invitations were sent out to various soccer enthusiasts to talk over the soccer situation. The meeting was held Wednesday evening in the American Woolen Company Welfare building and the following representatives were in attendance: John Haggas, William Hyde, Patrick G. Darcy, William Hume, William Hulce, Vernon Dobson, James W. Riley, Edwin Anderson, Percy Wilson, Thomas Gunter, Frank Tidwell, Robert Crompton, and Ernest Bennett.
The meeting opened with John Haggas outlining the object he had in view, namely the uplift in the game of soccer and his reason for calling the soccer men together. It was voted that Mr. Haggas should act as chairman and Ernest Bennett was called upon to record the minutes of the meeting.
Mr. Haggas then addressed those present saying that he had been giving much careful study of late to the soccer situation and that he had come to the conclusion that there was at the present time a barrier to progress of soccer football, and that by calling the members together and giving them an opportunity to express their different views the difficulty could be located and removed.
He believes that much progress has been made over the past years, when teams played without goal posts, and again played without nets, playing fields not roped off. At that time many players provided their own shoes and stockings, as well as paying their own traveling expenses. However, this is not the case today, thanks to the industrial movement which now provides in the majority of cases everything that is necessary for playing the game.
It was his opinion that much could be done to raise the standard of the game and that this could be accomplished by holding get-together meetings, whereby suggestions could be offered that would be beneficial.
One point he made was that the delegates should show more interest not only in the industrial league but the state association as well; another that something ought to be done to build up the league's finances, a part of the delegate's duty being to see that the league be placed on a good financial foundation and not have the treasury reduced to the last cent purchasing medals for the champions.
The meeting was open for suggestions and nearly everyone present had something to say. A great deal of discussion took place regarding professionalism and amateurism. While some thought that running a strict amateur league would improve the game; others took exception to this saying it would be a step backward in so far as the standard of soccer football was concerned, but all agreed that in a case where sufficient teams could not be mustered together under the present heading "open competition," an amateur league in preference to none at all would find favor where majority rules. This was yet to be put to the test.
James W. Riley gave a very interesting talk on this question. Personally he believed the highest standards of ball come from the professional. Although he held great respect for an amateur, one who lived up to statistics, yet during his travels he had been confronted with many problems pertaining to the so-called amateur. Although he had no proof, he said that he had reasons to believe that some had lost their amateur standing long ago.
Frank Tidwell, Edwin Anderson and Patrick Darcy spoke in favor of strict amateur league, while Percy Wilson, Ernest Bennett and Vernon Dobson were well satisfied with the open competition as it is at the present time.
It was said that American Woolen would be out for the amateur league but Percy Wilson took exception to that statement. Personally, he was well satisfied with the present brand of ball and if reverting to an amateur league would lower the standard of play he was opposed to it, for he believed in progression.
Ernest Bennett spoke in favor of the open competition in preference to the amateur league, for he believes that a change in that direction would be going a step backward, and should it so happen that sufficient teams could be mustered together for the open competition or a professional league, a majority should rule. He thought there would be a possibility whereby two divisions could be arranged satisfactory to both factions.
During the discussion the point was raised as to how the players who have already signed professional forms would stand with an amateur league. It was said that these players, and there are many, would have to be reinstated; that could not be done inside of 12 months. It was voted that the secretary write for information concerning this.
It was a well attended meeting and Secretary John Haggas expressed himself as well satisfied with the result of the first meeting.
Abbot Worsted and Fore River will play on the Arlington grounds Saturday in the State Cup series. This game was scheduled to be played on the Shawsheen grounds but

Stop the "FLU"

Sterilize Nose with Mintol Vapo-Cream During Epidemic in London in 1919! Menthol and Oil of Eucalyptus Proved Most Effective. Mintol is a saline containing both Menthol and Oil of Eucalyptus, together with other Antiseptic and Healing Oils which prevent the germs from spreading.

Boston, Mass., October 1918. Physicians here have found the most effective treatment for the Spanish Influenza is to apply hot cloths to the chest and throat and on the back of the neck and between the shoulders for 5 or 10 minutes. Then rub a mild cream or salve containing such ingredients as are found in Mintol Vapo-Cream. Cover the parts with hot dry cloths and arrange them loosely over the chest so that the vapors arising may be inhaled and the healing oils aid in relieving the patient quickly and healing the mucous membrane of the throat and nostrils. Its action is to sterilize the throat and nostrils, preventing the germs from producing their deadly work. Rub a little Mintol on the back of your tongue and this will aid in the sterilizing treatment.

Special Notice—MINTOL VAPOCREAM, so extensively used and recommended by Physicians and Druggists, throughout the country, is a remedy of exceptional merit and contains Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus and other healing oils, which Physicians everywhere use for inflammation and congestion of every description. The reason this remedy has met with such remarkable sales is due to its exceptional merit and wonderful healing properties. It contains the ingredients which proved so successful in combating the epidemic of Spanish Influenza in England and Spain where the epidemic originated. It is the best antiseptic for sterilizing the throats of children and grown-ups. Have a jar of Mintol in your home. It is as necessary for your protection as insurance on your home. A little jar is inexpensive and can be secured from your druggist.

WOMEN'S CLUB MUSICAL

Cello, Piano and Soloist Contribute to Enjoyable Musical Program of Monday Evening

The Shawsheen Village Women's club held its first musical Monday night in Balmoral hall. There was a very large attendance of members and guests and the program of the work of well-known composers was splendidly rendered. The meeting was an unqualified success.

The artists were Miss Virginia MacKnight, soloist; Marjorie Patten Weaver, cello; Miss Martha Smith, piano. Miss MacKnight sang very sweetly and is giving great promise. She has appeared a number of times this winter and has invariably pleased her audiences. Monday night she sang Holman's "Chanson d'Amour" with cello obligato, in a delightful manner.

Marjorie Patten Weaver proved herself a cellist of rare ability and was repeatedly encouraged. Her duet with Miss Smith was also much enjoyed. A word of praise is also due Miss Smith who played the accompaniments in a very sympathetic manner. The whole concert was very enjoyable and reflected much credit on the performers. The program:

Community Services

At the Community services held Sunday evening in Balmoral hall, Rev. C. W. Henry, pastor of Christ Church, Andover, was the speaker in the absence of Rev. Mr. Jefferson of the Baptist Church, Lawrence. His text was taken from the sixth chapter of St. Matthew, 11th verse: "Give Us This Day Our Daily Bread."
Fred R. Warren of St. Augustine's Church, South Lawrence was the soloist of the evening and pleasingly rendered, "Out of the Deep."

A meeting of Sunday-school teachers and officials was held at eight o'clock Wednesday evening at the Christ Church rectory and sixteen were present from Shawsheen Village.

Mrs. Brown of the Diocesan House, Boston spoke on administration of the Sunday-school. The teachers and Sunday-school officials of Shawsheen Village are grateful for the opportunity to hear Mrs. Brown as many points of interest were brought up and valuable information received regarding the Sunday-school.

After the meeting a dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Henry.

The Fall Enough

It was an Irishman's first visit to the wilds of America, and, strange to say, he was soon fast friends with an American. The American was a dead shot. One day, while they were strolling together through the woods, the American, wishing to show off his shooting abilities, said: "Say, pard, d'ye see that bi-r-rd high up yonder tree?" "Yes," answered the Irishman. "Waal," replied Sam, "I'll get that bi-r-rd, first shot." As he spoke, he raised his gun to his shoulder, took careful aim, and fired. It was a good shot, and the bird, after several somersaults, fell at their feet. The American picked it up. "I guess I've killed this bi-r-rd, pard," he drawled proudly. The Irishman pondered a while, then said: "O'm glad it's only guessin' ye are, for the fall was enough to kill it."

Herding sheep by airplane was the experience of an Australian explorer. During the trip over North Queensland the airman was offered the task of rounding up two large scattered flocks of sheep. He swept his plane around the outskirts of the flock and collecting all the stragglers drove them all together toward the paddock. The job was done quickly and without any great effort.
